Dr. Mitchell a Great Student.

For some years Dr. Mitchell has occupied a position in the foremost ranks of the educators of the South, and a prominent place in the literary world, to which he has contributed a number of articles on timely subjects. A close and thorough student, perhaps his most marked characteristic—a source of never-falling delight to hearers and resders as well—is a clear grasp of his subject, which, coupled with an unusual aptness of expression, has always made him a sort of inspiration to young men.

From time to time heretofore efforts have been made to attract Dr. Mitchell by flattering offers from other places, but his unswerving devotion to Richmond Coliege and to his home city have been proof against all attempts of this sort. One of the most recent, as well as most attractive, of these offers came from the University of Virginia, which invited him to an important professorship. Among schoolmen of his own type, surrounded by the congenial atmosphere of the great school, Dr. Mitchell could have spent the remainder of his days in comparative comfort and certain employment at the university; but he declined the post, preferring to remain in the smaller college here, to which he had given long years of faithful service. "I consider Dr. Mitchell one of the best educators in this country, and I was very said Dr. Alderman to one of the editors of the The Times-Dispatch some time later, referring with regret to his refusal to leave Richmond.

Major Wm. A. Anderson, familiarly known in political circles as the Lame Lion from Lexington," will not be a candidate for renomination to the office of Attorney-General in the Democratic primary next year. Major Anderson, who is now spending his vacation at his home in Lexington, sent an announcement to this effect to The Times-Dispatch yesterday. His friends had been pressing him for a decision in the matter for some months, and he told a representative of this paper before leaving the city that he would come to an early conclusion after arriving at his home, and would at one make his announcement to the people through the columns of The Times-Dispatch. Major Anderson has not only made a strong and faithful Attorney-General, but he has behind him a most distinguished record as lawyer, soldier and statesman.
